What is Changing with HRST Online Rater Training?

Health Risk Screening, Inc is happy to announce that HRST's Online Rater Training is being updated to improve security and ease of access!

Adobe Flash has been deprecated as of 12/31/2020 and most modern web browsers will end support of Flash by the end of January 2021. The current version of Online Rater Training is delivered through an application called "Learn", which is independent from the Health Risk Screening Tool. The Learn application utilizes Adobe Flash to deliver Online Rater Training to users with permission to access.

To move away from a Flash-based application for Online Rater Training, we've redesigned the course to be delivered from within the Health Risk Screening tool itself. We refer to this as HRST In-App Training.

How Do I Access Online Rater Training?

This means users who are required to take Online Rater Training to become a Rater in the HRST will be able to access the required training by simply logging into their HRST account.

-- Users who are currently in the process of completing Online Rater Training will have their progress migrated into HRST In-App Training and should expect to receive an email from HRS Support on how to continue.

-- Going forward, all new users who are issued Online Rater Training will complete the training from within HRST In-App Training platform.

-- Users who have already completed Online Rater Training will not be affected.

When Is This Change Going Into Effect?

This change will go into effect Friday, 01/08/2021
